

The Ohio Democrat.

BREHM & WHITE, Publishers.
LOGAN, OHIO.

CURRENT TOPICS.

It is said that Sarah Bernhardt is getting bald.

The heated term has just begun in Bulgaria.

Mrs. Cleveland is an expert with the needle.

New York has twenty-six first-class theaters.

A mushroom farm is being laid out near Niles, Mich.

President Grey contradicts the reports of his ill health.

Competition has reduced the fare in London buses to one penny.

Rents are lowering in London at a remarkable rate, it is said.

Bainstorming shows are coming to grief all over the country.

The visit of the Galata to this country cost Lieutenant Henn $10,000.

The newest shirts have got back to the old plan of buttoning in front.

At a Newport mushroom hunting party, a gent fell and smashed a $300 watch.

M. CHEVREUIL, the one-hundred-year-old French chemist, can read in the dark.

J. J. CARR, the owner of Jay Eye See, is worth $5,000,000, and began life as a blacksmith.

Old Fellows talk some of removing the seat of the empire from Baltimore to Columbus, O.

The St. Paul ice-palace has been located again and is to surpass in grandeur that of last year.

General Sherman says he never voted in his life and he never expects to vote or be voted for.

The visible globe of the sun, according to Prof. Proctor, is 1,350,000 miles as large as the earth.

There are sixty million standard dollars in circulation, with eighty-five million in the Treasury.

The Episcopal Church will celebrate the centennial anniversary of its formal organization in 1839.

M. GREY has a gift from the King of Abyssinia—two loving lions and four buffaloes with golden collars.

C. G. BULLARD, a Kalamazoo (Mich.) celery grower, has shipped 531 tons of that crisp article this season.

There are fifteen men under the age of thirty years in Portland, Ore., who are worth over a million dollars.

The water in the artesian well at Bell Plaine, Ia., is strong enough to throw out a boy who fell into it recently.

General Boulanger saves the French Treasury $300,000 annually by abolishing compulsory shaving in the army.

The fashion of wearing no jewelry is, of course, English. There it is the fashion to reserve the display of jewels for the evening.

Some Boston women got their hats checked in the cloak rooms of the theaters, and sit through the performance without them.

In taking down a chimney of the old "House of Seven Gables" on Turner street, Salem, a pine tree shilling of the date 1633 was found.

Quails have become so plenty in one place in Petaluma valley that the owner has been killing them off on account of the damage done to grapes.

A valuable find of gold is reported from British Columbia, near the Alaska line, and it is said $24,000 of the precious metal has been already taken out.

When John Adams was President he bought a billiard-table in France, had it set up in the White House and sent the bill to Congress, says the Washington Post.

As Eldorado (Iowa) man by mistake paid out a twenty-dollar gold piece for a theater ticket, the ticket seller hunted him up in the audience and restored the money.

PHINEAS is the only county seat in Oregon, and in fact the only one in the United States, that is wholly without any school district organization of any kind.

The use of natural gas has led to the manufacture of mirrors in Pittsburgh. Up to this time all mirrors manufactured in the United States have been from imported glass.

If you want to know whether a man is an actor wait until he says "my wife." If he speaks it as we have written it applaud him; if he says "my w-y-u-p" throw things at him.

A DAKOTA widow sold her land claim to a horse, and when the buyer platted a town and made $30,000 in a year she came forward with a breach of promise suit, which is still pending.

The newest shopping-bag is the best of all; the porte-monnaie is inside, the slit for handkerchief outside; has strap to fasten in front, with a tiny pocket book for change, car tickets, etc.

Mr. BRECHER, recently declared, in a lecture at Gateshead, England, that he never yet had spoken in a hall where 1,000 persons could breathe comfortably for an hour and a half together.

A FLORIDA negro who was shipped by a shark says the sensation was "sunthin'" like a feller gwine ter stick a lot of red-hot spikes into yer foot to make you own up to whar dem chickens went to.

The Emperor of Germany is subject to frequent attacks of cholera, and his physicians say, if allowed to last long, he is absolutely necessary to allow him to rest, might result in death.

The czar has been traveling and the customary plot to blow up his train has been discovered. What a large amount of money and energy is wasted in unsuccessful attempts to blow up the czar.

Reports from Yellowstone Park say that game of all kinds is increasing rapidly under protection. The herd of elk when they get beyond the limits of the park and are shot at, at once break for the park, and when they reach their shelter seem to know that they are protected, and lie down or go to feeding.

A FARMER near Blue Springs, Neb., was surprised the other morning on going over his farm to see a heretofore dry slough a running stream. Upon investigation he found that one of his horses had broken through a wet crust of earth from which wells of pure and cold water enough came to supply a town.

H. L. CLARK, of Higginsburg, Conn., brags because one of his ducks has laid 100 eggs this season, which is four times the yield of the average duck. What is more, from one of these 100 eggs was hatched a four-legged duckling that still lives and walks, using all of its legs, as if that was the proper thing for young ducks to do.

Mr. SNOWDEN DIXIEY, living near Baltimore, can probably lay claim to having been the father of more children than any other man in that section of the country. He has had the gratification of having twenty-eight children call him father—twenty-two sons and six daughters. There are now living fourteen—six sons and five daughters.

ANARCHIST VENGEANCE.

Gotfried Waller, Who Testified Against the Chicago Seven.

Narrowly Escapes With His Life From an Enraged Crowd.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."

Some one else said, "Let's go and see if the crowd followed him with cries of 'Hang the dog,' 'Choke him,' 'Kill him.'"

But Waller shook the man off the back of a revolver, shot several times into the crowd, for a moment they fell back, but soon came up again and attempted to hang him. Agala Waller freed himself and fled into the mass of people. By this time he was surrounded by a mob of about 500 men, and the police, who were on duty, could not be learned whether he had shot anybody or not.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—During the late Anarchist trouble Gotfried Waller was quite a leader among the men, and when his trial came on appeared as a witness for the State, and gave evidence which did much toward causing the conviction of the prisoners. Many threats were made against him. Last night, accompanied by a friend, he entered a saloon at 103 North Wells street, a favorite gathering place of the Swiss element of the laborers. Some one said, "There is the traitor."